Local Journalist Receives Award

At the Spring Conference the Michigan Association of Community Mental Health Boards presented Jerry Wolffe, Oakland Press reporter, the Jim Neubacher Media Award. This award is presented each year to an individual or organization from the media who has portrayed mental health services accurately and positively in an effort to reduce stigma of disabilities in the community. Jerry was nominated by the Metro Region which includes Oakland County Community Mental Health Authority.

Jerry has been a journalist since 1968 and a reporter for the Oakland Press for 13 years. He writes a biweekly column for the Oakland Press titled "Voices of Disability" and feature stories. Thank you, Jerry, for your journalistic efforts to reduce the ignorance and stigma surrounding people with disabilities. Congratulations!
